Plot Summary

The story begins with Miriam reflecting on her life and her marriage. She had been married to Jack for over 20 years, and they had three children together. Jack was a loving and supportive husband, but he was also a bit of a wanderer. He loved to travel, and he often left Miriam and the children behind for months at a time. Miriam had always been a bit insecure about Jack's absences, but she had always trusted that he would come back to her.

However, one day, Jack didn't come back. He simply disappeared, leaving Miriam and the children alone and heartbroken. Miriam was devastated by Jack's disappearance. She couldn't believe that he was gone, and she longed for him to come back. But as the years went by, she began to accept that he was never coming back.

In the years that followed, Miriam struggled to find her place in the world. She tried to fill the void left by Jack with her children, but she found that they were growing up and starting to have their own lives. She also tried to find solace in her friends, but she found that they were all too busy with their own lives to really be there for her.

Just when Miriam was about to give up on finding happiness, she met Grant, a kind and gentle man who was also a widower. Grant had lost his wife a few years earlier, and he understood the pain that Miriam was going through. Miriam and Grant began spending more and more time together, and they eventually fell in love. Grant helped Miriam to heal from the pain of Jack's disappearance, and he showed her that she could still find love and happiness.
